CEH

center for environmental health

Every victory begins with your support

Here at CEH, we had a tremendous 2014, and we couldn't have done it without you. Your donations helped us protect American families from toxic, disease-causing chemicals in a myriad of important ways. To name just a few:

- We got big companies to prefer flame retardant-free products: Our work is leading major companies to purchase flame retardant-free furniture in their offices. Facebook, Staples, Genentech, Kaiser Permanente, HDR Architects, and others have signed the CEH Pledge, bringing hundreds of millions of dollars of their spending to bear on the market.
- We helped end the toxic dangers of fracking in New York: Just recently, CEH was instrumental in Governor Andrew Cuomo's decision to ban fracking in that state. At the press conference, the state Health Commissioner held up a study co-authored by CEH as proof of unacceptable health risks involved in fracking. Next up: California.

- We've held companies accountable for endangering families: Over the course of 2014, CEH staff tested over 1,000 consumer products for harmful chemicals. We won legal agreements with many of the companies requiring that they change their toxic ways.

We couldn't have made this tremendous progress without the support and donations of concerned and aware individuals like yourself. It's a pleasure and a privilege to be fighting the good fight with you.

Thank You,

Michael Green
Executive Director
